

A Drawing Competition

By Yip Yu Ching, Angel

Last Saturday, Ricky and Helen took part in a drawing competition. They were sitting in a park happily and drawing with other children. There were having fun.

After that, they drew some pictures of the beautiful scenery. Helen thought Ricky's drawing was better than hers. She envied Ricky's drawing skills. Then, he suddenly saw a shuttlecock flying over his head. When Ricky got distracted, Helen secretly exchanged their drawings. She was nervous that Ricky might catch her red-handed. Then, Ricky found out Helen exchanged their drawings. He angrily confronted Helen, 'Why did you exchange our drawings?' Helen nervously lied, 'Huh? I didn't exchange our drawings.' Ricky was mad.

After a while, they fought with each other. Ricky yelled loudly, 'Give my drawing back!' Helen yelled back, 'No! It's mine!' They were furious. Later, Ricky pointed to the back of the drawing and said angrily, 'I wrote my name on it before I began so it's mine.' He proved that the drawing was his so Helen was embarrassed.

In the end, Helen felt guilty so she apologized to Ricky, 'Ricky, I'm sorry for exchanging our pictures and lying to you. Please forgive me.' He was happy that she apologized so he forgave her. They were joyful.
